Most concurrent players on Steam

PUBG: Battlegrounds

The epic battle royale PUBG: Battlegrounds recorded an all-time peak of 3,257,248 gamers playing at the same time on 13 Jan 2018. Neither PUBG nor any other game has managed to reach that lofty level on the PC gaming platform since, according to tracking website SteamDB. On 9 Sep 2018, PUBG became the first game on Steam to maintain 1 million concurrent players for an entire year.

INORITE!

- PlayerUnknown was the gaming tag of Ireland's Brendan Greene, the game's creator.
- Publisher Krafton decided to change the game title from PlayerUnknown's Battlegrounds to PUBG: Battlegrounds in 2021.
- The game's popular phrase "Winner Winner Chicken Dinner" is thought to have originated among gamblers in the 1930s.

All aboard the Steam train

PUBG sits ahead of some formidable competitors on Steam. The game with the second-most-concurrent players as of Feb 2024 is newbie Palworld (Pocketpair, 2023, see pp.66 and 95) with a peak of 2.1 million players. First-person shooter Counter-Strike 2 (Valve, 2023, above right) is next at 1.8 million, ahead of action RPG Lost Ark (Smilegate/Tripod Studio, 2019, left) on 1.3 million and MOBA stalwart Dota 2 (Valve, 2013, right) with 1.2 million. The only other game to top a million is Cyberpunk 2077 (CD Projekt Red, 2020), which hit 1,054,388 concurrent gamers.

Largest collection of Tomb Raider memorabilia

Rodrigo Martín Santos

When the first Lara Croft game dropped in 1996 (Tomb Raider, Core Design), it made an instant fan of a nine-year-old Spanish boy who soon began seeking out memorabilia. During an official count two decades later, Rodrigo's collection had grown so large – to 3,050 distinct items – that it had to be split between two sites, in Madrid and Tenerife. Among his most prized possessions is an Arctic coat worn by Angelina Jolie in the 2001 movie, Lara Croft: Tomb Raider. “It has been an adventure that has changed my life,” says Rodrigo. “It has taken me across the world.”

Largest collection of Sonic memorabilia

Barry Evans (USA) also has a collection of 3,050 items – but in his case, it's of Sonic the Hedgehog memorabilia. After 30 years of collecting, Barry's Blue-Blur hoard is now on display in a room that he's styled to look like “Yesterdays” – his favourite childhood arcade. His first ever item was a Sonic bubblegum container.

Best-selling mmo

World of Warcraft

Blizzard's genre-defining massively multiplayer online RPG celebrates its 20th birthday in Nov 2024. Over the last two decades, WoW has seen dozens of rivals come and go, and recorded sales of more than 40.6 million copies, including its various expansions. This total includes 2020's Shadowlands, but the figures for the most recent title, Dragonflight (2022, below), have not yet been released.

Longest marathon playing WoW

Drawing on more than a decade of experience battling his way across the wilds of Azeroth, Hungarian gamer Barnabás Vujity-Zsolnay endured a Warcraft session that lasted an epic 59 hr 20 min 12 sec. He completed his stint at home in Budapest on 28 Sep 2022.

With worldwide box-office takings of $438,899,824 (£345.8 m), the game's big-screen version, Warcraft (2016), assumed the throne for the highest-grossing movie based on a game. And there it stayed for seven years. It needed a certain plumber and his adventures in The Super Mario Bros. Movie (2023) to beat back the orcs and the trolls. See pp.68–69 for our look at how films based on games have fared with moviegoers.

Fastest completion of Sonic the Hedgehog 2

On 25 Sep 2023, speedrunner eandis set a new record on the 1992 Sonic sequel. A back-and-forth had been going on with JoeyBaby69 before eandis broke the 13-min mark – and then lowered it further to 12 min 43 sec. The game is more than 30 years old, but there's life in this veteran hedgehog yet.

Sonic the Hedgehog

The Blue Blur has appeared in comic-book form since at least Nov 1992, when he featured in a four-part mini series published by Archie Comics (USA). This was followed by a full launch in Jul 1993 of Sonic the Hedgehog, which ran for 290 issues until Dec 2016. Although the series was cancelled, another US firm, IDW Publishing, picked up the license and since 4 Apr 2018 has published a monthly comic under the same title. Artist Tyson Hesse, who has worked on both series, also animated cut scenes for the games Sonic Mania (2017) and Sonic Origin (2022), and is responsible for the look of our favourite blue hedgehog on the silver screen (see pp.68–69).

"It always bothered me people with disabilities were underrepresented in the professional Dota 2 scene."

Cristal1337, aka Alexander Nathan

In Jan 2019, streamer Alexander Nathan (NLD) set out to build a Dota 2 team of people with disabilities like him. Within days, Nathan had the four teammates he was looking for, but it didn't stop there. Five years later, that Dota 2 team has evolved into a 37-member esports collective "made from gamers with disabilities, for gamers with disabilities". In addition to competing in tournaments for games as diverse as Counter-Strike: Global Offensive (Valve, 2012), Call of Duty (Activision, 2003) and Tekken (Bandai Namco, 1994), Permastunned advocates for the estimated 400 million disabled gamers worldwide.

Mobile battle royale

On 21 Mar 2024 – two years after it was announced – Activision released Call of Duty: Warzone Mobile. More than 50 million people pre-registered for this much-anticipated free-to-play FPS, which deployed with the fan-favourite map Verdansk. The battle-royale mode supports 120 players, up from the 100 available on the OG console and PC version.

Call of Duty: Warzone

Within three days of its launch on 10 Mar 2020, Activision's free-to-play battle royale had gathered over 15 million gamers. Players, known in-game as Operators, leapt at the chance to take up arms. Warzone cut down its rivals on the way to topping 50 million downloads within the month and more than 100 million by Apr 2021. For many people, it was their go-to game during the COVID-19 lockdowns.

Best-selling strategy game for PC

The enduringly popular real-time strategy StarCraft (Blizzard, 1998) has sold more than 11 million copies. The game's three carefully balanced factions and complex gameplay earned it a dedicated multiplayer community, and it remains a staple of esports events to this day.

Highest-earning female esports player

Sasha "Scarlett" Hostyn

Sasha "Scarlett" Hostyn (CAN) had earned $465,550 (£371,025) in prize money as of 12 Apr 2024, according to Esports Earnings. The winnings come almost exclusively from StarCraft II: Wings of Liberty (Blizzard, 2010), though Scarlett has played a few StarCraft: Remastered (Blizzard, 2017) events. Her biggest prize – $50,000 (£35,848) – came in 2018, when she won the Intel Extreme Masters (inset), an international Olympics-affiliated StarCraft II competition.
